If Death can be delayed in Cancer patients then why Cancer can not be treated completely?

Excerpts from my Jungle Diaries (April 2012 onwards) Part-2

“I am not a registered medical practitioner” I said humbly.

“But you have written a lot on cancer herbs and documented information about 35000 Traditional Formulations used in Indian Traditional Healing. Then you must suggest some miracles to save the life of my brother. Please do something.” Early morning I was attending the visitor reached from Mumbai without any information.

His brother was at socalled last stage of cancer and leading oncologists suggested his family members to take him back as there is no hope.

“Patient is outside in the Ambulance. Please see him.” I was in dilemma. I moved to see the patient. The condition was really serious. But I was not in position to extend any help legally. “Please take the patient at the place for stay. Let me think over it.” I said to patient’s brother Shyam.

This is true that I have documented a lot in the field of Traditional Medicinal Knowledge but I am Agronomist (who is expert in crop production and soil management) by education and Homeopath by hobby. Instead of using Homeopathy on human beings I used it on plants through Agrohhomeopathy. When Shyam insisted much I decided to help them with the help of Traditional Healers. But the Healers were at three-four hours distance. Shyam agreed to arrange the vehicle to reach to the Healers.

At socalled last stage of cancer generally the family members of patients start new experimentation. From bitter decoctions to Bhabhoot every thing is offered to the patient already suffering from lethal disease cancer. In such situation the Traditional Healers use many types of herbs and clearly say that they can delay the death and reduce the sufferings of patients but unable to save lives.

Delay the Death? How much? Up to one month –The Healers reply.

But during my Ethnobotanical surveys I have observed that in many cases this delay is of several months. Sokli Kand-out of so many herbs the name of Sokli Kand came in my mind when Shyam was describing the case.

When I interact with the Traditional Healers I always raise questions about the delay of death. If delay can be done then why not patients can be treated completely? While documenting over 35,000 Formulations the name of Sokli Kand like herbs came frequently in the discussion but I noted that the use of Sokli Kand requires much effort and judicious use. The Healers learnt the Traditional Healing seriously can only use the Sokli Kand in effective way. In general it is claimed with cancer herbs that they are rare in occurrence and very difficult to get. But it is not true with Sokli Kand like Herbs, available in forest in abundance. Its use in advanced stage of cancer is difficult.

“We adopt three approaches. First of all to restore the vitality of body, secondly to stop spread of cancer and thirdly to prevent recurrence of new spots. The herbs used for all these three approaches interact negatively in most of the cases when given at a time. By trials and errors we try to create equilibrium. We keep the patients under our supervision and from wild fruits to traditional foods every thing is given along with medicines. But the patients expect big miracles. As reaction to indigenous medicines after long use of modern medicines many times body reacts in negative way. At that situation patient looses the hope and shift to different treatment.” The Traditional Healers were explaining their experiences in year 1997 when I was conducting surveys in Chhattisgarh Plains.

Every one knows that successful treatment of cancer like socalled incurable diseases is possible only through the herbs present in our virgin forest. The Traditional Healers can play a vital role in this regard but unfortunately no one is coming forward to learn from the Healers. Every one is behind the credit game. As result in our reference literature there are thousands of research papers are there on Traditional Cancer Management but none of papers is of practical value.

In February, 2012 I was invited by the Central University of Chhattisgarh for guest lecture. I delivered lecture on Traditional Allelopathic Knowledge through which the Traditional Healers enrich common herbs with desired medicinal properties. One of the organizers later contacted me for cancer formulations I have documented.

“Please tell me the name sir. I want to submit a research project on it.” He said.

“Let me ask to the Traditional Healers who own the Knowledge.” I said clearly.

“No sir, I am asking to you only. By this project you and I can win international awards.” His intention was clear. I decided to maintain distance with him.

India is wasting billions on Traditional Knowledge research but unfortunately the real researchers i.e. the Traditional Healers are never involved in these projects. They are used as show piece till completion of research and after that kept away from awards and patents. Seeing this trend now most of the Healers rarely share true knowledge to such researchers.
